

ABSTRACT

A system and method for facilitating offline voice enabled consumer transactions. The system may include a voice browser and a voice recognition system. Using information contained in a voice data packet created by a user, the system can search various structured and unstructured databases to determine one or more matches relating to the voice data packet. This can be performed in a non-real time manner. If the desired item or service is found, the user can purchase the item or service.